

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

WELSH-ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

E B A

E, A prefix in composition. It implies aptness to act, or to move.

E, standing alone, as a word, implies action going on, and when it accompanies a verb it is the agent performing the action described without the discrimination of a person. The pronoun it; but the particular character is generally marked by the context; except in the Silurian Dialect, where it implies he, and his. It is appropriately the sign of the active participle, making actions of the present tense, which without it would be otherwise. It has also the form, in many expressions, of what would be termed an adverb. Examples, gwelir, there will be seen; e welir, seeing takes place, or, it is seen; e'm gwelir, the seeing of me takes place, or, I am seen; e dyngai, the agent swearing was, or he (she, or it) swore; e dyngai y dyn, the man swore, nag e, not it, or it not.

E fymal y gath bysgod, ond ni fymal wynebu ei throed.

The cat would have fish, but she would not have to wet her foot.

Adage.

Eang, a. (ang) Ample, large, wide, loose, free.

Gwr eang, a free man.

Eang yw y byd i lawb.

The world is spacious for all.

Adage.

Yr ydwyf yn gynt—i dal'r ddaig—
 Na'r eilon i'r lan, na'r eilon i'r coed,
 Nag o droed a roed i oradain.

I am swifter to the houses of the two, than the roebuck to the bank; than the hind to the wood, or than the speed that is given to the swiftest wing. L. G. Côté.

Oiana parchellan, addan di'r eilon
 A gread arar cer Caer Rheun.

Litra, little pig, hear thou the melody which the feathered tribes are making by Caer Rheun. Myrddin.

Caraf caws fal forehan ludd,
 A golygon hwyr hir-wyn i grudd;
 Caraf eilon mygr math arasdeud,
 Eiliwed aserw, a seirch cystud.

I love the nightingale the obstruction of the morning sleep in May, with downcast looks, and long white-sided head; I love the sweet melody, heavy upon her the reproach of abiding in solitude, with the trappings of affliction. Gwalchmai.

—Gwneuthum

Dynwilen oed a ban lle baw,

Lle gwelais hwen geirw trais tral;

Ddywyl y hi addawad

Ddyfod i eilwydd ofyn,

Lle ni ddaseth llawen o dda.

I made on Monday an assignation with the fair where I have been, where I have seen her of the hue of the foamy waves of the stealing ebb; on Sunday she had promised to come to seek an assignation where the blitheesome nymph never came. D. ab Gruffydd, i Forfudd.

- Eilwys, s. pl. (al—gwys) Powers of harmony.

E a wnaeth eilwys,

Yn llyso paradydd,

O achen aswys

Gal, s. m.—pl. gell (ga—al) What is uttered, ejected, spread out, or cleared; an epithet for milk; a cleared or fair spot; a plain; a goal, or conspicuous station; also what breaks out, or makes an irruption; an enemy. The Cymry, though they were generally careful of preserving their patronymic name, were often called after names characteristic of the countries they inhabited; the two most universal of which being the open plains and the woods; hence originated the two grand distinctions of Gal and Celt, or the open plain and the covert, with others of similar import. Of the same meaning with Gal and its derivatives are Gwal, Prydain, Peithgw, Gwynedd, Gwent, and Syllwg, fair or clear regions. With Ceritiad, may be classed the Gwyddyl or Gwyddelod; the Ysgotiad, or Ysgodigion, and Celyddon,—the people of the coverts; of whom it is remarkable to observe, that not one became so powerful and stationary as to confer its name on the country. These two classes subsisted by different means, the result of which must of necessity have been a state of warfare; hence with the Celt the appellation of Gal came to be synonymous with Enemy; for as the Gal or cleared region, became too fully peopled, it sent out colonies in search of other settlements, to occupy which war must frequently have been the consequence mau glain, or mau mael, snake stones, adder stones, or adder beads. The mau glain, transparent stones, or adder stones, were worn by the different orders of bards, each having its appropriate colour; the blue ones belonged to the presiding bards, the white to the druids, the green to the ovates, and the three colours blended, to the disciples. There is no certainty that they were worn from superstition originally; perhaps that was the circumstance which gave rise to it. Whatever might have been the cause, the notion of their rare virtues was universal in all places where the bardic religion was taught.—It may still be questioned whether they are the production of nature or art. Be that as it may, they are always to be found in great numbers; and there are people who may be aptly called hunters, from whom they are to be had; but they insist on being credited, that the Gleision are only to be had at one season of the year; and that they are blown by a knot of snakes. Si chwythau y glain y maent? what, are they blowing the gem? (applied to people laying their heads together in conversation.)

Gwyddel, s. m.—pl. t. od (gwydd) That is of the woods, that is in a sylvan state; a savage. It is an appellative, synonymous with Celt, and Ygotiad, for an individual of such tribes as lead a venatic life in woods, in contradistinction to the Gai, living by cultivating the ground. Whichever of these two primary classes of mankind had the ascendancy gave its name to the whole country: Hence Gwyddel is the general term in Welsh for a native of Ireland, because the tribes, of which the name is descriptive, appeared predominant to those who imposed it. There is a tradition of Wales's being once inhabited by the Gwythelians; or, more properly, its first inhabitants were so called; and the common people in speaking of it, ascribe some ruins about the country, under the name of Cytiau y Gwyddelod, to them; and the foxes are said to have been their dogs; and the polecats their domestic cats, and the like.

HU, s. m. r. That is apt to pervade, or to spread over. An epithet of the Deity, in the bardic theology, descriptive of his omniscience. Huon is another appellation of the same import, and derived from Hu. The hound, on account of his acute scent, was adopted as the common emblem of this attribute, and which, if we may rely upon the accounts of some authors, became an object of idolatrous worship; for he is unquestionably identified in the Heus of Gaul, and the Anubis of Egypt.

Dwy ryw awen, dloer, ewybr,
 Y sy'n y byd, loewbyrd lwybr,
 Awen gas Grist, ddiddist ddadi,
 O lawm dro, awen dryyddi;
 Awen arall, nid cull can,
 Ar golwydd, fadr argoellust,
 Yr hon a gafas, gyw HU,
 Camrwag pryddodion Cymru.

Truly two sorts of active geniuses are there in the world, of manifest path; a genius from Christ, pleasing the assertion; of right tendency a sprightly genius; another genius, though not discreet the song, there is of falsehood, base the symptom, the which, HU knows, the disorderly poets of Wales obtained. Dr. S. Cent.

HU gadarn, por hoew geldawd,
 Brenin a roe'r gwin, a'r gwawd,
 Emherawdr tir a moroedd,
 A bywyd olli o'r byd oedd;
 Al ddiolodd, gwedy ddiw,
 Aradr bralg, arnoed-gadr, gwiw;
 Er dangaws, ein ior dawnoeth,
 I'r dyn balch, a'r difaich doeth,
 Bod yn oren, nid gas gair,
 Un-greft gas y tad law-gair.

The mighty HU is a sovereign who is a ready protector, a king distributing the wine, and the praise; the emperor of the land and seas, and all of life in the world was he; after the deluge he held the strong-beamed plough, active and excellent; this did our gracious Lord, to show to man, the proud and the humbly wise, that it was the choicest art with the faithful father; the word is not false. Iolo Goch.

Ychsein—
 HU gadarn, a darn o'r did,
 A'i bum angel a wotych,
 A phetrian aur flandau fluch.

They are the oxen of the mighty HU, with a piece of his skin, and his five angels, you see, and a golden harness of silver sky. Llywelyn Mair, 17th cent.
